Between Scylla and Charbydis: meeting the demands of the academic research community and a global business

Justin Cavernelis-Frost & Natalie Broad

The Rothschild Archive
London
Between Scylla and Charybdis?

It doesn’t have to be this way...
The Rothschild Archive London
A product of our past
A collection of collections

Business records • Family papers • Photographs • Paintings • Artefacts
Serving the research community:
A sanctuary for study
Nathaniel, 1st Lord Rothschild (1840-1915)
The Archive in business: the corporate memory

Safe from the bank in the rue Laffitte, Paris, 18thC
Using history in a contemporary way

Welcome to Rothschild Reserve

If you are a customer, please email: customers@rothschildreserve.co.uk or call 020 7280 5757
Heritage at our heart

Vitrine at 11, rue Berryer, Paris home of Adèle, Baroness Salomon de Rothschild
C.1885

The New Court Vitrine, 2011
Learning about ourselves from our history

…I learnt something also which will be far more important to me in my future life. This is the fine tradition of New Court which combines business with humanity, without neglecting either.

Siegmund Warburg (1902-1982)
Justin Cavernelis-Frost, Archivist
Natalie Broad, Assistant Archivist
info@rothschildarchive.org