The European Landscape Convention, both with the Faro Convention, describes landscape as a product of the individual and public perception of the system of environment, human products and the multilayer knowledge and meanings produced in the time about it. Since an archive is the life sediment of its creator, it comes to become a significant part of that landscape.

ANNALISA ROSSI