Restorative justice is a transformative framework that has gained prominence in recent years as a holistic approach to addressing harm, promoting accountability, and fostering reconciliation. Transitional justice is a broader term that encompasses a range of mechanisms, including truth commissions, criminal prosecutions, reparations, and institutional reform. There are some similarities between transitional justice and restorative justice. Both approaches emphasize the importance of truth-telling, accountability, and victim participation. They also both seek to promote healing and reconciliation. However, there are also some important differences between the two approaches. Transitional justice is typically more focused on the macro-level, addressing the needs of society as a whole. Restorative justice is typically more focused on the micro-level, addressing the needs of individuals and communities.

Archives play an important role in these processes, as many restorative justice initiatives address historical injustices documented in archives, offering a platform for acknowledging past wrongs and promoting reconciliation between marginalized communities and broader society. Addressing historical harm requires navigating power imbalances, cultural sensitivity in how different cultures approach justice and reconciliation, and legal and institutional systems that allowed the injustices to happen in the first place.

This is particularly important in the context of colonialism and slavery, where archival records can be used to shed light on past injustices and to help survivors find healing. Too often, archives are seen as relics of another time, with little to no connection to our current experience. However, as the article “Inside Barbados' Historic Push for Slavery Reparations” shows, history is not just a long-distant past, but has direct and ongoing effects on our lives: “People and places are closely connected. Time-yellowed records in the Barbados National Archives and the museum link specific but long-dead people to the living.” In “Colombia: unburying of a political smear against transitional justice”, we learn about how “In front of the families of their victims, eight former military officials publicly acknowledged their responsibility in a dozen murders...In addition to bringing closure to the victims' families, these confessions could also put an end to one of the crudest disinformation campaigns directed against Colombia’s transitional justice - born out of the 2016 peace agreement.”

Reparations within the context of restorative justice aim to acknowledge past wrongs, provide restitution to those who have been harmed, and work towards healing and reconciliation. By providing compensation or support to individuals or communities that have been historically marginalized or disadvantaged, reparations and alternative justice mechanisms address the structural inequalities that contribute to ongoing injustices.

Archives serve as critical resources for documenting historical injustices, acknowledging truths, substantiating claims, amplifying marginalized voices, and facilitating public education and accountability. The archivist’s role in reparations, restorative and transitional justice is essential for creating a foundation of evidence-based understanding, fostering healing, and promoting equitable and just outcomes.

SAHR News

- The section’s executive board met virtually for its regular meeting on July 6th.
- At the DCDC23 conference - jointly organised by the British Library, the UK National Archives and JISC (held at the University of Durham, 11-13 July 2023) - a panel on ‘Archives and Collections at Risk’ (a principal theme of the conference) included a presentation by David Sutton on the Safe Havens For Archives at Risk Initiative.

Editor’s Note

With the new team of collectors and editor, there are also some differences in content and structure of the newsletter:

- For the English version of the newsletter, the description of the news items is given in their original language (currently mainly Spanish, French, and English).
- The news items are listed two times, in different structures: First by section (Events, International News, National News) and then region/country. A second time by heading (i.e. topic/subject).
- The individual news items are then structured as follows: Title. [Abstract.] Type of resource [Author(s)], Date of publication, [Publisher,] Link. [Topic]

Poland: Exhibition - Strength in Numbers: The Polish Solidarity Movement - Until 2024-08. After decades of state oppression and denial of workplace rights, 16,000 workers at the Lenin Shipyard in Gdańsk, Poland, went on strike in 1980. Their protest erupted when labour activist Anna Walentynowicz was fired from her shipyard job. The mass strike action inspired the Solidarity movement that united 10 million workers and led to momentous political change. Strength in Numbers demonstrates the power of collective action during one of the largest labour uprisings in modern times. United States of America: Conference - Why Isn’t Remembering Enough to Repair? - On line 2023-08-23. Upcoming events at Zócalo Public Square 2023-08-23: The Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel did not believe in collective guilt. Instead, he asked for repair, and for holding the post-World War II generation of Germans responsible “not for the past, but for the way it remembers the past. And for what it does with the memory of the past.” Other societies and communities have taken up Wiesel’s call—at the national level, South Africa’s Truth and Reconciliation Commission and Argentina’s efforts to prosecute Dirty War military leaders, and at the local level, movements like the Greensboro Truth and Reconciliation Commission in North Carolina and land back efforts in the Pacific Northwest. Brazil: As comissões da verdade e os arquivos da ditadura militar brasileira. Esta obra explora o contexto histórico-legal das comissões da verdade no Brasil e no mundo e reconstrói as estratégias e ações das comissões brasileiras para o acesso aos arquivos da ditadura militar (1964-1985). A partir da análise da emergência do reconhecimento dos arquivos para as investigações sobre violações dos direitos humanos e a efetivação do direito à informação, à verdade e à memória, o livro discute o fenômeno da criação de comissões da verdade em todo o território nacional brasileiro e as relações das comissões com os arquivos. Nesse sentido, evidenciam-se a insuficiência das políticas de gestão documental e um quadro de negação, ocultamento e destruição dos arquivos do período da ditadura militar. Todavia, identifica-se que, apesar dos problemas e limitações, as comissões da verdade conseguiram criar estratégias e implementar ações para superar essas dificuldades, dentre elas, parcerias com as universidades, especialmente com os cursos de Arquivologia. Como lacuna na atuação das comissões da verdade no Brasil, o livro constata que foram poucas as ações educativas realizadas fora dos círculos acadêmicos e voltadas a uma parcela mais ampla da população brasileira. Corruption

Brazil: Bolsonaro barred from political office for eight years. Four judges of Brazil's Supreme Electoral Tribunal have voted to bar former President Jair Bolsonaro from holding political office for eight years. A majority of the court's seven magistrates ruled that Bolsonaro had violated Brazil's election laws when, less than three months before last year's vote, he summoned diplomats to the presidential palace and made baseless claims that the nation's voting systems were likely to be rigged. Brazil: As comissões da verdade e os arquivos da ditadura militar brasileira. Esta obra explora o contexto histórico-legal das comissões da verdade no Brasil e no mundo e reconstrói as estratégias e ações das comissões brasileiras para o acesso aos arquivos da ditadura militar (1964-1985). A partir da análise da emergência do reconhecimento dos arquivos para as investigações sobre violações dos direitos humanos e a efetivação do direito à informação, à verdade e à memória, o livro discute o fenômeno da criação de comissões da verdade em todo o território nacional brasileiro e as relações das comissões com os arquivos. Nesse sentido, evidenciam-se a insuficiência das políticas de gestão documental e um quadro de negação, ocultamento e destruição dos arquivos do período da ditadura militar. Todavia, identifica-se que, apesar dos problemas e limitações, as comissões da verdade conseguiram criar estratégias e implementar ações para superar essas dificuldades, dentre elas, parcerias com as universidades, especialmente com os cursos de Arquivologia. Como lacuna na atuação das comissões da verdade no Brasil, o livro constata que foram poucas as ações educativas realizadas fora dos círculos acadêmicos e voltadas a uma parcela mais ampla da população brasileira. United States of America: Conference - Why Isn't Remembering Enough to Repair? - On line 2023-08-23. Upcoming events at Zócalo Public Square 2023-08-23: The Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel did not believe in collective guilt. Instead, he asked for repair, and for holding the post-World War II generation of Germans responsible “not for the past, but for the way it remembers the past. And for what it does with the memory of the past.” Other societies and communities have taken up Wiesel’s call—at the national level, South Africa’s Truth and Reconciliation Commission and Argentina’s efforts to prosecute Dirty War military leaders, and at the local level, movements like the Greensboro Truth and Reconciliation Commission in North Carolina and land back efforts in the Pacific Northwest. France: La science ouverte. Ce nouveau numéro de la revue Culture & Recherche est dédié à la science ouverte. Il présente les productions de la recherche culturelle des acteurs et partenaires institutionnels du ministère de la Culture dans un contexte national, européen et international. Parmi les modes de « faire de la recherche » aujourd’hui, « les pratiques scientifiques plus ouvertes, transparentes, collaboratives et inclusives, associées à des connaissances scientifiques plus accessibles et vérifiables et soumises à l’examen et à la critique, améliorent l’efficacité, la qualité, la reproductibilité et l’impact de l’entreprise scientifique » (Recommandation de l’UNESCO sur une science ouverte, 2021). Trois écosystèmes sont sollicités : les données ouvertes (Open Data), le libre accès (Open Access) et des outils-logiciels libres et gratuits (Open Source). Chercheurs, ingénieurs, informaticiens, bibliothécaires et documentalistes, usagers et société civile se mobilisent pour expérimenter et mettre en œuvre ce régime de productions des savoirs partagés, afin de répondre, notamment, à des enjeux à fort impact sociétal.
