50 years after the Civil and Military Coup d’état in Chile: Archives for Justice and Non-Repetition
(Paulina Bravo, Karen Cea, Javiera Manzi and Valentina Rojas, LUISAS Archivist Collective)

On September 11, 1973, a civil and military coup d’état supported by the United States, the main power of the Western bloc in the context of the Cold War, overthrew the democratically elected socialist and transformative government of President Salvador Allende and Popular Unity installing a fierce dictatorship for 17 years. The Military Junta led by Augusto Pinochet used state terrorism to control society, persecute and exterminate its political opponents and impose the structural reforms of neoliberalism. Thousands of people were exiled, exonerated, executed, tortured and made to disappear, leaving an entire society crossed by fear, but at the same time, nourished by the hope of those who, in a fight of resistance against repression, grew bonds of solidarity and search for truth and justice.

During the post-dictatorship, although the State made some advances in matters of truth and justice – such as the development of two Truth and Reconciliation Commissions – it was, and have been, human rights organizations that continued their fight to achieve truth, justice and memory for the crimes perpetrated by the dictatorship. Thus, thanks to the work of the organizations and the testimony of former political prisoners, several former detention, torture and extermination sites were recognized and recovered to transform them into sites of memory; and there have also been advances in the recognition of repressors and the clarification of crimes against humanity. However, 50 years after the coup d’état, we continue to fight against the lack of reparation policies, impunity, denialism and the relativization of the crimes of the dictatorship.

In terms of archives, the judicial prosecution of those who committed crimes against humanity has been prevented, among other reasons, by the lack of evidentiary information found in archival documents linked to the dictatorial bureaucracy. In Chile, as in other countries, this is due, on the one hand, to dictatorial and post-dictatorial legislation that has established the existence of secret archives, as is the case of law 18,771 issued by Pinochet months before leaving power, which exempts the Ministry of Defense as well as the Armed Forces and the Police from transferring their documents to the National Archive, and article 15 of law 19,992 developed in 2004 during the government of Ricardo Lagos, which establishes secrecy for 50 years, even for the justice, of the documentation generated within the framework of the National Commission on Political Imprisonment and Torture. But it is not only the explicit barriers to access to documents that prevent access to the information contained therein: this is also the result of a lack of a general national policy that promotes archival treatment for the subsequent systematic study of public documents that are currently available in places such as the National Administration Archive and that, eventually, can provide evidentiary information that allows progress in truth, justice and non-repetition.

As is the case in many other places in the world, in Chile the extreme right has raised denialist speeches and supporters of the dictatorship, which seek to roll back the political and social advances that have been achieved and reached consensus around human rights. How do we fight today against the denial of the events that occurred in Chile 50 years ago? How to advance in truth, justice, memory, reparation and guarantees of non-repetition? As archivists we have the ethical conviction that an indispensable path is to have archival policies that guarantee public access and preservation of documents from the past and present. It is necessary that this continues to be a demand from human rights organizations that have launched campaigns against secret archives, but it must also be assumed as a responsibility of the State in the context of a country without an archives law. Along these lines, a few weeks ago a National Search Plan was launched, incorporating among its work axes the management of documents and information that makes it possible to clarify the truth and advance justice. Along with this, within the framework of the commemoration of the 50 years of the coup d’état, President Gabriel Boric announced the creation of a National Archive of Memory, a measure that, although it has opened a debate in the local archival community (see articles All archives are human rights archives and The National Memory Archive: a human rights policy), is an advance in public recognition of the role of archives for the exercise of rights.

50 years after the civil-military coup, the state still has debts regarding its obligations in matters of truth, justice and reparation, at the same time that denialism and also indifference towards State terrorism is spreading among the population. In this context we are certain that access, protection and preservation of archives is a condition of possibility to deepen present and future democracy and non-repetition.
The SAHR Executive Committee met on 26 September 2023 and considered a number of issues. The 2024 programme for First Tuesday Talks (about which this newsletter carries regular reports) is beginning to take shape. Other projects, notably the Truth Commission Archives Locator project, are nearing completion. The activities scheduled to mark International Human Rights Day (10 December) are being programmed.

On 8th September, the section submitted comments in response to the OHCHR call for input on Promoting Environmental Democracy. The text of the SAHR comment is available on the SAHR webpage.

The SAHR is also supporting an application to fund a high-level cataloging project at the Congolese National Archives, and to identify any material of relevance to Human Rights.

A General Assembly for SAHR members will take place on 19 October 2023, at 5pm CET. All members are encouraged to attend.

The graphic novel "Woman, Life, Freedom", conceived under the direction of Marjane Satrapi, is released in bookstores this Thursday, September 14. One year after Mahsa Amini’s death, the book tells the story of the year of revolution that Iran has just experienced. For cartoonist Bahareh Akrami, whom we met, it is crucial not to let this fight fall into oblivion. [video recording] [Akrami, Bahareh], 2023-09-14, www.courrierinternational.com. [National News]

Iran, Islamic Republic of: What happened to Mahsa/Zhina Amini?. In September 2022 Mahsa/Zhina Amini, a young woman from Iran’s oppressed Kurdish minority, visited Tehran with her brother. She was stopped and arrested by Iran’s “morality” police (gasht-e ershad), who routinely arbitrarily detain women who do not comply with the country’s abusive and discriminatory compulsory veiling laws. [newspaper article] [Amnesty International], 2023-09-15, Amnesty International, www.amnesty.org. [National News]
